Researcher Development Programme

- Our Researcher Development Programme offers a range of training workshops to help you develop research and transferable skills.
- These will be valuable to you during your study but also for your chosen career, whether in academia or beyond.
- Our RDP is mapped to the national Researcher Development Framework.

Kickstart your PhD Workshop

- Compulsory for all PhD students.
- Workshops held throughout the autumn term online and in person.
- Workshop topics:
 - Researcher Development Programme
 - Resources for PhD journey
 - Responsibilities of PG researcher
 - Supervisory relationship.
- The workshop also helps you to reflect on and assess your current skills and introduces the Researcher Development Assessment (RDA).

You must attend this workshop AND complete online assessment as part of the probation process.

Supervision for researchers

Ensure that you have a meeting set up with your Main Supervisor within the first two weeks of registration to discuss:

- How your supervisory team-student relationship will work (e.g. preferred means of contact, feedback mechanisms and turnaround times)
- Your meeting schedule
- Your work plan
- Any initial concerns
- Skills training requirements
- What you will be required to prepare for your induction review (six weeks after registration)
- How progression monitoring will be handled within your academic school (i.e. any school specific requirements)
- Facilities/resources

Progression monitoring for researchers

Review Stages	Timing
Induction review	Within 6 weeks of registration (for both PT and FT PhD students)
Probation/end of year review	10 months for FT PhD students and 12 months for PT PhD students
End of year reviews	At the end of each year
Mid-year reviews (if necessary)	Mid-year reviews may be scheduled in cases where concerns are raised at an end of year review
Submission review	3 months prior to the minimum period of registration (e.g. 3 years for FT PhD and 5 years for PT PhD students)

Progression and Examination Annex of the Code of Practice provides detailed information about the review stages and links to the review forms:
