Choosing an apprenticeship

The new Apprenticeship Standards were developed by employers known as Trailblazer groups. They put together the knowledge, skills and behaviours that employees should have at the end of their apprenticeship training.

There are many Apprenticeship Standards across different levels. The University does not offer all of the Standards, but you can search for other training providers on the Institute for Apprenticeships and Technical Education website: instituteforapprenticeships.org/apprenticeship-standards

Finding an apprenticeship

As an apprenticeship is a job, you need to be employed before applying to the university or training provider. If you are currently employed in a relevant job role, we can speak with your employer about setting up their apprenticeship.

If you do not yet have an employer, there are a few things you can do to secure an apprenticeship:

- Register with the Government's Find an Apprenticeship service (findapprenticeship.service.gov.uk/apprenticeshipsearch) to search for current vacancies
- Seek relevant work experience in the sector you want to work in
- Check individual employer websites for potential vacancies
- Reach out to potential employers or those hiring to see if they would consider taking you on as an apprentice
